Educating and Certifying the Healing Touch™
Spreading Healing, Light and Love, Creating Wholeness on Earth through heart-centered service, education and professional development.

Healing Touch – a Nurturing Energy Healing Therapy
Healing Touch is a nurturing and heart-centered biofield (energy) healing therapy. Gentle touch assists in balancing physical, mental, emotional and spiritual well-being. The goal in Healing Touch is to restore harmony and balance, to support the body’s natural healing ability. It is safe for all ages and works in harmony and collaboration with standard medical care.

Healing Touch is used in a wide variety of settings including hospitals, long term care facilities, private practices, hospices and spas and is taught in universities, medical and nursing schools and other settings internationally.

HTI Healing Touch Certificate Program
The HTI Healing Touch Certificate Program includes 5 levels of training provided by Healing Beyond Borders Certified Healing Touch Instructors. Classes are open to anyone interested in healing. Students progress through the course at their own pace and may take as many levels as desired. Nursing and Massage continuing education contact hours are provided.

Healing Touch grew out of the nursing practice of Janet Mentgen and was developed as a certificate program by the Education Committee of the American Holistic Nurses Association (AHNA) in 1989. In 1996, the AHNA Healing Touch Certificate Program and credentialing was transferred to Healing Touch International and became the HTI Healing Touch Certificate Program; this original standardized curriculum continues today. AHNA has endorsed the HTI Healing Touch Certificate Program since 1997. See www.HealingBeyondBorders.org. Click on Education for class information.

Healing Beyond Borders Healing Touch Certification
Healing Beyond Borders Certification Board offers credentialing for Certified Healing Touch Practitioners (CHTP), and Certified Healing Touch Instructors (CHTI). Certification was established within AHNA in 1993, and transferred to Healing Touch International, now dba Healing Beyond Borders, in 1996. Students, Practitioners, and Instructors are responsible to practice with integrity, adhering to the Healing Beyond Borders Standards of Practice / Code of Ethics, and Scope of Practice.

Such environmental influence has now been found to impact molecular structures that act as packaging material, called histones, for the genetic DNA. These histones have additional roles that involve permanently activating or deactivating genes. Specific markers on the histones, (epigenetic marks), are important for the specialization of body cells and the passing on of cell memory in daughter cells during cell division and doubling of the DNA. Simple diet and epigenetics appears to be very closely linked. The most well known example of this is with Agouti mice; they are typically yellow, obese, and prone to diabetes and cancer. What is most interesting, however, is that when females are fed high dose B12, folic acid and choline prior to and throughout pregnancy, the offspring are primarily brown, slender, and healthy. They in turn, typically have offspring that are also brown, slender and healthy. It appears that the enhanced diet of the mother has impacted the genetics of future generations.

When I was at university and studying psychology and child development, the Nature vs. Nurture debate was alive and well. It now appears that these two seemingly opposing views, may actually be symbiotic and synergistic, both impacting the development and physical and mental health of future generations. Our knowledge of medical and social sciences, human genome research, energy field anatomy and technology, and now, the work in epigenetics, is enabling us to actively consider how we are impacting the health and well being of present and future generations in a very broad and holistic way. While most research has been done with nutrition, we are called to consider all of the many possible environmental factors that impact the future well-being of humans and other species. It also highlights the critical necessity of providing basic resources and necessities that...continued on page 4 support health, respectful and compassionate social and family relationships, in the critical stages of the developing human.

Family, socio-cultural behaviors and belief systems have greatly impacted generation upon generation. This is identified in the prevailing mores and values that are expressed within particular family and social groups. Indeed, I found it notable that when teaching biomedical ethics to medical students, the prevailing default means for decision making was not the use of ethical guidelines, but rather, the use of the student's own family or cultural belief system by which they were raised. For example, if the family value was one of discrimination against a particular group, that value would play the prominent role in the student’s ethical decision, and would trump any consideration of ethical principles such as nonmaleficience, or justice, or fairness, or patient autonomy. I suspect that these values and behaviors, having indeed been imprinted in the cradle, have obvious effect energetically, and most likely, epigenetically.

With the Nurture experience (environment), each generation is raised (tattooed) with particular norms, beliefs and behavioral expectations. As practitioners, one of our tasks is to examine our own personal habits, beliefs, and behavioral responses in order to know ourselves, such that we can identify our particular habitual patterns and shadow responses and egoic projections of our perceptions onto others. This is a critical piece, as our particular work is about therapeutic relationship, and in order to be in a healthy relationship with another, it’s important that we establish a healthy relationship with ourselves. Goldfield and Taylor write that, “It is no accident that the older, closer and more important a relationship is, the more entrenched the habits will be – in fact, they are some of the deepest ones in our consciousness…and often formed in early childhood. In some spiritual teachings, these have roots in both this lifetime and perhaps lifetimes past.” (Another way to consider this is the influence of archetypes and epigenetics upon these habits.) It is through knowing ourselves, that we have the greatest opportunity for supporting others in knowing themselves, and thus potentiating the possibility of healing for the highest good.

Some habits are so deeply entrenched that they require time, persistence and patience; yet changing these unhealthy patterns can be extremely powerful and rewarding. Important aspects of pattern and habit recognition involve self-awareness, self-compassion, and understanding the lineage of these patterns. It is often helpful to enlist the aid of a skilled team when working with a strong and seemingly unhealthy pattern. This team could include a skilled counselor/psychotherapist, spiritual director, energy therapist and holistic health practitioner with experience in working with pattern recognition and support, along with our standard health care team. As Pema Chodron often remarks, “the wonderful news is that, as humans, we are so messy, we have endless material with which to practice upon and hone our skills.”

Goldfield and Taylor (2014) offer “5 Ways to Get Free”. These are: (1) Expand Awareness and includes becoming familiar with one’s habitual patterns. (2) Make Space through simply breathing and moving into another body position or posture and focusing awareness upon what you are experiencing. (3) Explore Choice through spending some time exploring other options for action or response. (4) Step into Choice through simply choosing how you want to act with voluntary awareness yet without attachment to outcome. (5) Re-Run. I think of this as "reframe". Review your habitual response, note the pattern, and consider what might have been done differently, thus allowing you to consider another choice in the future.

These are seemingly simple steps that essentially involve being mindful, alert, present and aware, while considering that with each step we can begin anew. It involves seeking an objective mirror, perhaps a trusted, caring teacher, to assist in discovering our individual messiness and stickiness, our limitations to wholeness. In delving to manifest new and healthy patterns filled with more life giving light, sometimes by simply shifting a tiny degree, we can allow a new opportunity to be revealed, a new pathway to unfold, a new creation to be discovered and thus affirmed. In addressing the building blocks that have formed who we are, we have the opportunity to dissolve limitations and manifest more light for not only ourselves and the present, but for generations and generations to come.

Dissolving Limitations: Part Four - Manifesting Abundance

by Mary-Cathrine Campbell RN, BA, CHTP, Healing Beyond Borders President

Over this past year we have focussed on aspects of dissolving limitations - those thought patterns or habits which prevent us from expansion and growth. How do we move from worrying about the “lack of” to “manifesting abundance”?

As described in the last quarter’s Perspectives in Healing, we are carefully reminded that it is often our attitudes that pilot our actions…attitudes which may have become so deeply ingrained that we are not conscious of their effect on our daily lives.

Recently I watched a TED talk given by Michael Norton, of the Harvard Business School. He mentioned an experiment that aimed to correlate personal happiness and financial security. I am not going to give away the ending, because I hope you will be inspired to see it for yourself on YouTube. The results are not what you might expect, but have wonderful implications for each and every one of us.

One of the examples that comes to mind is the fear of scarcity…Can you imagine if new practitioners or instructors were “guided” by senior members about the expectations that might exist in certain geographic areas, for example—how to practise, where to practise, or financial guidelines that might not be adapted to specific community or personal situations.? Or miscommunication, resulting in not being included because you weren’t a health care professional? Apart from being diametrically opposed to Janet’s focus in providing Healing Touch training and certification for everyone, whether involved in nursing or not, this could lead to confusion, uncertainty and disengagement of members within that particular region. If there is poor communication, the unease could go within, resulting in suspicions, gossip and negativity, weakening the overall community. Bickering and even verbal hostility could erupt. Hardly the example of “heart-centered” actions we claim to live by!

Thinking about such situations reminds me of the fable of heaven and hell. A man dies and, because he has lived a good life, goes straight to Heaven. He is met by St. Peter, who tells him that because of his exemplary life, he may enter Heaven immediately, or have an opportunity to see what Hell is like.

Being curious, and assured that he is going to reside in Heaven, the man decides to visit Hell. He sees room after room of people, sitting at long tables filled with every sort of delectable food. They are all miserable, crying and screaming in frustration. Instead of arms, they have long-handled forks and spoons---too long to reach their mouths, and so despite the abundance of delicious food, they are all starving.

The man quietly returns to Heaven. Once there, he enters and is amazed to see room after room of people, sitting at long tables loaded down with similar fabulous cuisine that he saw in Hell. However, the people in Heaven are all happy and laughing. They too, have long-handled forks and spoons instead of arms, but use these utensils to feed each other. Everyone is satiated, filled with nourishment and delight because of his neighbour’s willingness to help and share the abundance.

As we move into a new year, let us reflect on our attitudes and habits. If we are able to live in the faith and knowledge that each one is unique and will be provided for, we will be freer to live without the worry of “will there be enough?” Sometimes we have to “act as if” in order to manifest the abundance we seek. There is more than enough for all. As Sir Winston Churchill so succinctly said: “We make a living by what we get, we make a life by what we give.”

May all of you be blessed with an abundance of health, prosperity and love.

Happy Holidays and Happy New Year.

Dissolving Limitations to Healing - Manifesting Collaboration

by Mary O’Neill RN, CHTP/I Immediate Past President

Collaboration is an important component of our work in Healing Touch. People coming together to hold a Healing Touch class and helping to make it successful is a wonderful beginning. As communities begin to grow, it is important to provide others with the chance to learn and assist in all the various roles within the classroom. We need good coordinators and classroom helpers to assist in making a warm, welcoming environment for new students. Rotating these opportunities provides learning for all. Having an opportunity to encourage the growth and leadership within a community is an amazing and necessary process. We see others taking on new roles supported by the instructor in the community. It is always imperative to look at how the community is being supported, encouraged and developed. Is it in line with the Core Values of HBB?

I observed this happen in 1996 when Healing Touch was first brought to St. Louis, MO. Joanne Guerrero met Vicki Slater, CHTP/I at the AHNA Conference in St. Louis. Joanne was committed to bringing Healing Touch to St. Louis and absolutely determined to build a community of healers in this area. It was exciting to watch the growth of the classes. Friendships developed as we progressed through the Levels. Since there were no nearby venues for food in the area, we had lunch together and networking with each other was a natural outcome. As people became certified, the work of mentorship was shared and our experiences in that role deepened our knowledge.

We had a variety of instructors brought into the community to teach the course curriculum. This was a rich opportunity to learn and grow from their experiences. Over the years we developed instructors in our own community. Today, we continue to rotate classes and invite additional instructors to share their experiences and insight with our local students. It is all done with the common good of the students in mind.

"It is literally true that you can succeed best and quickest by helping others succeed."

~ Napoleon Hill

Part of our role is to look for the seeds of leadership in members of our community and nurture them. In order for our Healing Touch work to continue for seven generations as Janet stated, we need to be always striving to identify and grow new leadership for the future of our organization. Offering encouragement and support to a student is an excellent way to build a firm foundation for them in their HT work. It is in the act of opening the door to the possibility that they have gifts to offer, that trust begins to develop and they are willing to deepen their commitment to the work and the local community.

Instructors have the opportunity and the responsibility to continue to support, encourage and develop potential instructors within their community. This action ensures our work for the future in the brightest and most complete manner. Holding onto ideas of scarcity, territory or fears of not enough students to go around is not for the best for themselves or the work that we offer. As potential CHTPs show interest in becoming an instructor, offering a simple time to discuss their dream and hopes is a perfect way to mentor them into instructor growth and development. Answering questions and being available to support their progress provides the collaboration for their success. It sets a healthy groundwork to be able to move in the direction of growing into a leadership role in the community. It also can set the pattern for how they will welcome new instructors in years to come. Those interested in becoming instructors then take on the duty of follow through with application, training and requirements of observations and co-teaches. These are important skills that develop their leadership, priorities and decision making abilities.

Instructors in training are to be welcomed into classes to observe and co-teach. It takes a seasoned instructor, comfortable with their own ability to manage and support both the classroom and the student instructor, to accomplish this seamlessly. It is a nurturing, supportive energy to offer this class experience for the students and the Instructor in Training. The lead instructor can also learn a great deal about themselves, as our own healing is always in process.

If I am an effective leader then I have set up a system that is not dependant on me.”
~George Couros

This is an important aspect of a healthy community. In providing growth and encouragement for others, we are ensuring the longevity of the work when the day arises that we can no longer offer the classes or we no longer want to offer the classes. Sharing and spreading the work prevents burnout and frustration that one is holding everything together. It allows a seasoned instructor to take time off for much needed sabbatical, vacation or recuperation if health issues arise. The senior instructor can then feel confident that a healthy community has been established that will continue seamlessly when needed.

“Gettin’ good players is easy, gettin’ ‘em to play together is the hard part.” ~Casey Stengel

We are all aware that the success of this depends on the personalities and the ability to adapt to the situations. Some people are just easier to work with than others. We all have our unique personalities, perspectives, wounds and old baggage that we bring to any endeavor. This is where our work in Healing Touch can help us in manifesting collaboration. We provide the tools to maintain a healthy life in our classes. Walking our talk is paramount. We need to take a good hard look at our own shadow and face the fears, our ego and concerns that impede growth and collaboration. This is the underpinning of our progress toward collaboration and dissolving limitations. Doing our own healing work on collaboration, the joys, struggles, triumphs and the failures can provide fertile ground for dissolving the limitations. Receiving Healing Touch, journaling the situation, clear, open communications are excellent tools to help lay the groundwork for a community built on team work. The task is not easy but the long lasting rewards are worth the effort.

Practitioner Perspective

On Writing and Healing Touch

by Cheryl Pallant MA, CRP, CHTP

As part of my mentor agreement, I documented the year-long period between my L4 and L5 training in Healing Touch by writing poetry. Poetry, like snapshots, helps me articulate experience that may otherwise go unnoticed. The writing would further my understanding of practicing Healing Touch and help define my journey of becoming a practitioner.

My poetry is highly individualized. Years ago, in what became my first published poetry book, I learned that writing is valuable in not only what it reveals, but how it reveals. Expressive energy conveys through the content as well as the form, the images and words along with their rhythm and syntax. My style is often polylinear, full of word and sound play, informed by forty years of meditation and thirty years of dance practice. My poetry takes subject-verb-object structure, as is typical in this writing, and acknowledges multiple and simultaneous threads of thought. The writing, like its reading, is best done with the total body, not only the mind. Read for its ready logic but also for the felt reverberations that come from sound and associations in meaning. Read with an openness of attention that sees both the obvious and marginal.

To write, I quiet the part of my mind inclined to categorize and criticize and let my body speak its language. My body engages in a flow of its own idiosyncratic expression that rides on the nuances of breath. I tap into an awareness beyond day-to-day knowing and embrace the lushness and mystery of each word. I tap in, also, to the field around me.

As a prompt, my poems often began with “Her body listens...” Using “her” or “she” rather than “I” liberated me from limiting the subject to preconceptions and supported an expansion of my energy, awareness, and imagination. One poem begins, “How her body coughs organ and stench, a heave toward hauling unheavenly...” Another: “She releases knowing’s addiction to holds/upon the mind. She balances stones without glue and hears/without ears. I wrote about the glow and colors visible to my third eye, the heat pouring out from my hands, and how cultural dismissals of intuition impede its cultivation. A froth of memories and impressions poured into a sea of words. A dream-like place not bound by usual five sensory confines emerged.

Fifty poems later and the homework for L5 complete, I recognize the writing process is similar to what is accessed when working with clients: Center and ground energy. Clarify an intention. Let go of outcome. Step into a realm that is larger than oneself, a realm that is intimate, timeless, and sacred. Loosen ego control and watch the dance of mind, body, and spirit. Welcome guidance, a natural flow, a generative energy. Watch for images (or voices or sensation) and how they carry insight and healing.

In writing, I looked for recurrences and anomalies. An image or voice can be a portal to meaning. They act like catalyzing symbols, poetic messengers, a potent tool of transformation. I’ve come to know that the golden light that appeared to me while working on a client or writing a poem affirmed being on the right track.

In a class I teach called Writing From the Body, a blend of writing with somatic awareness, I encourage students to write and move. They create more readily and feel best when their flow is not inhibited. I’m tempted to say the same about clients; healing takes place when they open to their energy. My role as practitioner is to assist them in opening energy channels to support their own healing process.

At times, I encouraged clients write about their experience, to record and further what the body already knows but may only share in a whisper, a shudder, or fleeting image.

Deep listening engages the ears, eyes, heart, and mind. Such is the way of healing. So, too, for writing.

Author Bio: Cheryl Pallant, MA, CRP, CHTP is the author of five books of poetry, a nonfiction book on dance, and four chapbooks. She teaches writing and dance at University of Richmond in Virginia.
As members of Healing Beyond Borders, we are dedicated to our mission of “Spreading Healing Light Worldwide and Creating Wholeness On Earth”. How do we manifest the Light within ourselves and perceive the Light in others in the presence of our shadow? “Urgings of the Heart, A Spirituality of Integration” written by Wilkie Au and Noreen Cannon and conversations with my spiritual director gave me a pathway to an answer.

As certified practitioners and students of Healing Touch we are taught the healer preparation of grounding, centering, attuning, and setting an intention for the client’s highest good. Following our preparation, we are open to receive the energy of Light, allowing the heart energy to overflow with its attributes of compassion, innate harmony, healing presence, and unconditional love. After years of training and doing the work, this centering process becomes second nature and occurs rather quickly with a moment of focused intent. When we enter into this energetic relationship with another person, we are immersed in a sea of energy and, in that perfect moment, we are one with the Light.

How then do we manifest this Light in our normal, day to day life situations when stress is mounting and we are faced with adversity, hurt feelings, anger, or just plain irritating people? Tension and strain can often surface when we encounter major differences in philosophies, personalities and temperaments, personal struggles and needs. We find that implementing the flow of Light under these circumstances is more difficult and complicated than we first thought. By our human nature, we are a mixture of light and dark, part angel and part monster, positive and negative, unity and separation, yet, most of us struggle with acknowledging or accepting our “shadow self”. Instead of peaceful acceptance, we project our shadow onto our neighbor, transforming the world around us into a mirror that shows us our own faces. We can tell that a piece of our own shadow has been projected onto another when we react disproportionately to what we perceive. Do we react with self righteous indignation, evoke judgment or criticism, or highly admire someone for qualities that we do not see in ourselves? Learning to recognize our shadow by noticing how we react to others is an invaluable means for growth in self knowledge.

Our spiritual leaders, religions, and indigenous people have given us useful guidelines to teach us how to live harmoniously with this energy of Light that casts shadows. As an organization, Healing Beyond Borders, also established core values of integrity, heart centeredness, respect of self and others, self care, service, community, and unconditional love to guide our actions toward working collaboratively in community while fostering our own personal growth. Awareness of our shadow self is necessary for self discovery but we do not want to dwell in a place of darkness. We find balance by focusing on the Light and nourishing the positive aspects of our personality. When we gratefully accept ourselves as creatures; limited and imperfect, yet good and loved, we feel a sense of wholeness. As we embrace the totality of our being, shadow and all, and lovingly accept ourselves without condition, we are the Light that illuminates out to the world.

I would like share an excerpt of song lyrics by Leonard Cohen, quoted in the novel, How the Light Gets In.

Ring the bells that still can ring

Forget your perfect offering

There is a crack in everything

That’s how the light gets in

Vice-President, Healing Beyond Borders, Educating and Certifying the Healing Touch™

Membership Marketing Highlights from 2014!

Of course, the BIGGEST news was the launch of the new website at Conference! We hope you have been enjoying the new features. (Plus, we can now track how many people are coming to our website!)

One marketing objective for 2014 was to increase communication and engagement with the Membership. Compared to last year, the number of emails sent increased by 183%. The Open Rate of these emails slightly increased from 2013, but the big news is that the Click Throughs (when you click on a link in the email) increased by more than 3,000%!! (That's not a typo.)

Have you noticed the Healing Touch Blog on the website? Breaking news appears there, so visit the website often. Plus, our current President, Mary-Cathrine Campbell, has been updating the Membership with a special email about once a month.

Another objective was to increase awareness of Healing Beyond Borders and its Membership. We’ve increased postings on our social media platforms: Facebook (now has 2,736 likes); LinkedIn (we’ve hit 1,011 members!); and Twitter is updated every time we send a notice on Facebook. New this year – YouTube Videos. You can find them on the website...scroll down once you go to the home page.

We’ve been talking about Credentialing with Healing Beyond Borders on social media, announcing special partnerships while exhibiting around the country on behalf of Members, and most recently, Healing Touch and Healing Beyond Borders was featured in the December 2014 Massage Magazine. If you haven’t seen the article yet, it’s located on the website under the ‘About Tab’, then select ‘Media on Healing Touch’. A different version of the article is in the printed version, so check out both, and pass them along to clients, colleagues, friends, and your data base as a marketing tool.

We are nearing the celebration of the winter solstice in the Northern hemisphere, the midnight of the year, and the summer solstice in the Southern Hemisphere. It is a time of sharing, a time of remembering. The sounds of hustle and bustle grow dimmer as the light recedes and the unhurried rhythm of darkness deepens. This seems like a perfect time to reflect on 2014 and share the 4th quarterly news from the BOD.

Board of Directors Acknowledgement of Service and Welcome
With heartfelt appreciation for their selfless service, we thank outgoing committee members. Their contributions to fulfill our ongoing vision and mission are immeasurable. Outgoing members include: Sue Kagel, Nurse Planner; Education Committee, Mary Szczepanski; Ethics Committee, Terry Sparks; Certification Board Nola Schmitt; Instructor Advancement Committee, Carol Schoenecker, Chairperson and Diane Davison. We also, extend a warm welcome with sincere gratitude to our new certification board members, committee members, or new chairpersons: Certification Board, Judith Aufenthalie, Pegi Black, and Diane Davison; Ethics Committee, Deborah Goldberg; Instructor Advancement Committee, Bonnie Johnson, new Chairperson.

Treasury Report:
The 2014 fiscal year focused on community outreach and expansion. Although there was a steady inflow of revenue and judicious control of expenses during this time of growth, the budgeted cost for the newly designed website combined with lower than expected net income, resulted in a loss of revenue for this year. Despite this loss, we remain financially secure. As a member of Healing Beyond Borders, Educating and Certifying the Healing Touch, you have access to the financial report presented at conference, found in the member’s section on the website.

Committee Reports:
Our membership base has been growing and we welcome 137 new student members through the initiation of the special student campaign offered in 2014. The BOD is continually working to enhance membership growth and retention.

Education: Barbara Schommer, Chairperson.
The “Healing Touch: Enhancing Life through Energy Therapy” is now available. The Board of Directors asks that you purchase your books through the HBB website as a greater portion of the proceeds will benefit our Organization. Healing Beyond Borders received CE renewal approval of the HTI Healing Touch Certificate Program by the American Holistic Nurses Association through August 2016 and by NCBTMB (National Certification Board for Therapeutic Massage and Bodywork) through December 2017. Instructors should ensure that are using the most current CE Certificate of completion. Please contact the office if you have any questions.

By October 2014, there were over 2,000 new students who have attended Level 1. The 2014 Instructor’s Workshop was planned and implemented by the education committee and well attended by 85 instructors and instructors in training. A transcript of the minutes from the workshop was mailed to each instructor. Each attendee of the Instructor Workshop received a complimentary gift of the new Healing Touch text from an anonymous donor.

The education committee accepted responsibilities previously held by Sue Kagel, volunteer Nurse Planner, and is learning the AHNA’s and NCBTMB’s operational requirements for continuing education approvals. The office Education Administrator will collaborate with the Nurse Planner from the Education Committee who will be appointed by the Board of Directors, to oversee the process of review and preparation of renewals of the standard curriculum CEs and new applications for Professional Development classes. Plans to expand the Professional Development series are in process. Annis Parker is the new Board liaison for this committee.

Ethics: Sarah Porter, Chairperson.
Joel Anderson, Board of Directors, has accepted the position to be the Board liaison to this committee. Recommended Book List suggestions were forwarded from the ethics committee, approved by the Education Committee and Board of Directors.

Certification Board: Laura Hart, Chairperson.
The Certification Board recommended to the BOD that the Certification Board members, who review English applications, be increased to assist with the continued on page 17 increasing quarterly review workload. Two additional members were added to this committee this quarter. We have welcomed 95 newly certified practitioners for 2014. Application packets for new CHTPs and CHTIs were reviewed by the Certification Board and recommendations were forwarded to the Board of Directors for minor clarification updates for the 2015-2017 application packets. Updates are in process.

Instructor Training and Advancement Committee: Bonnie Johnson, Chairperson.
Ten Level 1, two Level 3 and two Level 4 applications were received and approved for the 2014 Instructor Training classes. We have welcomed 9 newly certified Level 1 instructors in 2014.

International Committee: Mary-Cathrine Campbell, and Lisa Anselme, Chairpersons.
Mary-Cathrine and Lisa are focusing upon increased communication and strengthening relations within our international communities. They have re-initiated Skype calls and are considering “chat” areas as a means to intercommunicate.

Research Committee: Joel Anderson, Chairperson.
The newly revised research resource is in process and the expected date of release is December 2014. We received 159 responses to the member survey and appreciate the time you took to complete the questionnaire. The data was compiled and details of that survey were made available to you via ezine and website. It is through each and every voice that we best learn how to serve you. We take your feedback seriously and strive to take actions that address your thoughts and recommendations. Joel has a scheduled speaking engagement at the Canadian Conference in British Columbia in April 2015 on Healing Touch research.

Health Care Integration Update/Exhibiting: There was HBB representation at The American Massage Therapy Association, American Board of Integrative Health and Medicine and PlaneTree Conferences. Maureen Kowba RN, HBB Board of Directors and Rauni Prittine King RN, Past HBB Board of Directors, represented Healing Touch and our organization at the American Integrative Health and Medicine Leadership Advisory Council meeting. In addition, HBB continues to provide free consultation to individuals and health care systems desiring to integrate Healing Touch within facilities or health care systems. Education position statements have been issued regarding education and credentialing through Healing Beyond Borders. Evie Caprel and Kimberly Gray co-authored an article for Massage Magazine featuring Healing Touch and massage that will appear in the December 2014 issue.

Business/Marketing: Evie Caprel, Chairperson.

Our beautiful, new website was launched during the 2014 Conference through collaboration of this committee, office staff and the web builders. Videos and photography for the site were initiated during strategic planning. In addition to the pleasing aesthetics of the site, it is user friendly and highly functional. A few minor computer glitches were forward and have been remedied. Following the initiation of the website, the committee has developed a well planned marketing strategy for 2015 with the following objectives: secure sponsorships through a corporate membership program; increase membership offerings and benefits; and with additional funding resources, enhance the website with additional content to serve members. The BOD is reviewing a business agreement for a 12 series educational program to market your Healing Touch practice.

Conference: Planning for the 19th annual Conference is already underway. The 2015 Conference will be held in sunny Naples, Florida on September 30 thru October 4, 2015. The theme for this year’s Conference is “The Joy of Healing”. The committee members are Lisa Anselme, Mary-Cathrine Campbell, Joel Anderson, Kimberly Gray, and Jeanne Whalen. We ask that you “save the date” and invite a friend to Conference.

We wish you a safe and joyous holiday season!

After weeks of watching the roof leak
I fixed it tonight
by moving a single board

~ Gary Snyder,
from “Hitch Haiku” in The Back Country, 1967

A couple of weeks ago I fired up my early morning journal practice after a long dry spell. In the “between” times, my much less graceful practice is to roll out of bed at 6 am, make a pit stop, put on a pot of coffee, and hit the computer, where within three minutes of opening my eyes I am immersed in email, the blare of gory news stories, and the frantic stew of bombardment.

But then, just before bedtime a couple of weeks ago, I decided to do it differently. I rooted through drawers until I found a new Mead notebook, cleared all the detritus off my dining room table, and placed the virgin notebook front and center. And, just to be sure I didn’t forget, I put a neon post-it note on the laptop screen: Write in your journal!!

The next morning, I woke up. Of course I’d forgotten my new resolve, but the sight of a screaming yellow post-it brought instant remembrance. I veered left, landed in the dining room, and broke out a new purple gel pen. A few deep breaths later, I was off and running—er, writing.

After all these years and miles of ink, you’d think I wouldn’t be surprised any more at the power of the pen. But surprised I was; it was mere minutes before I was engaged in a conversation with my favorite spirit guide, a productive, outcome-focused, solution-oriented, optimistic, cheerful presence who positively brims over with inspiration, both pragmatic and profound.

Twenty minutes later I had outlined my day, cooked up a nifty solution for a nagging problem, and watched myself write words of wisdom that brought me to tears of relief and gratitude.

For decades my journal has been my portal for immediate connection with my interior world. It mystifies me how I can go for months on end without remembering to remember the roots of my psychological and spiritual self-care, but I guess that’s life on the earth plane. The good news is that there is always the whisper, or the holler, that calls me back.

In the two weeks that I have been writing in my Mead notebook as I watch the sun color the sky in shades of pink and orange, I have fallen back in love with my writing practice. And the thing I love the most is that every morning, I have a front-row seat to my own transformation. I observe myself co-create with the Divine. I ask a question, and before the purple words are formed, the answer pops into focus. In the last two weeks I have:

- outlined a marketing plan for 2015
- noodled through the priorities for editing ten chapters of my next book
- resolved three or four pressing issues, the solutions to which have eluded me for months (the same months I haven’t been writing, by the way!)

- poured out gob stopping gratitude
- fired off an unsent letter to someone who is getting on my last nerve
- almost instantaneously come to a place of compassion and prayer for that same someone
- identified blocks to progress on a key project
- received inspiration for action on those blocks
- reported on the resolution of those blocks
- received insights, inspiration, and intuitive guidance from a host of angels, guides, and unseen companions, my old buddies and some new friends who have shown up just in the last several days!

It’s conscious co-creation in twenty minutes a day, for free. All I have to do is show up with a willing heart and spirit, and turn left toward the notebook instead of right toward the computer!

Author Bio: Kathleen (Kay) Adams is the director and CEO of the Center for Journal Therapy, Inc., a psychotherapist in private practice in Denver, and a best-selling author. A long-time friend of Healing Beyond Borders, she is a frequent speaker at Healing Touch conferences and events. She has been writing journals since she was 10 years old.
Several years ago I had the great pleasure to attend a dinner party, seated next to best selling author, Sophy Burnham (A Book of Angels). Over dinner, our conversation quickly turned to prayer. I remarked that her guidelines for prayer, so nicely outlined in her book, was nearly identical to that taught in guided mental imagery: 1) Pray in the present tense; 2) Pray in the positive, 3) Offer gratitude, and 4) Detach (surrender) from the outcome. These same components of prayer offer a similar approach to the power of manifestation: Creating a desired effect from the “womb of possibilities,” or what Deepak Chopra calls The Gap. Prayer and intention have much in common. The workings of manifestation are both simple and profound.

Medical intuitive, Caroline Myss, often talks about manifestation and the all too common sabotaging efforts we employ which derail our best efforts to create the life we want. She calls this sabotage the “unconscious resistance,” and it is very powerful, and very destructive. Both conscious and unconscious minds need to work together for a desired outcome, but this is rarely the case. Instead, there is great opposition from the unconscious mind. Bluntly stated, you can say all the positive affirmations in the world, but if the unconscious mind isn’t on board, nothing is going to manifest. In fact, you end up spinning your wheels. Guilt is not the answer. An exploration into the workings of the mind, however, is a great place to start. A good meditation practice helps too. Working to tame the ego is not a bad idea either.

My studies in health psychology were greatly influenced by the incredible work of Carl Gustav Jung. Jung spent his career trying to unlock the secrets of the unconscious mind and share these with the world. The unconscious mind, he said, speaks a whole different set of languages than the conscious mind. The unconscious mind speaks in colors, symbols, metaphors, dream fragments, stories, archetypes, synchronicities and intuition. The conscious mind is limited to words and numbers. When both minds come together, it is a formidable force. When both minds work independently, it can result in personal chaos. To access the wisdom of the unconscious mind, he said, we need to become well versed (fluent) in the language of the unconscious mind; a process he called psychic equilibrium. Among his many brilliant insights, Jung once said, “Until you can make the unconscious mind conscious, you will see everything in your life as fate.”

When things don’t manifest as desired, perhaps it’s best to take a closer look at the dynamics of consciousness. Metaphorically speaking, think of your mind like a tug of war: The conscious mind (with one person pulling in one direction) and the unconscious mind (with 9 people pulling in the opposite direction). Myss sees a lot of mental sabotage with people in their attempts in their healing process, where one’s identity is closely associated with one’s disease. I tend to see a lot of mental sabotage with people attempting to manage their stress. The same can be said for manifesting.

The real power of manifestation comes from understanding not only the workings of the conscious mind (and ego), but that of the unconscious mind as well. If you, like me, saw the movie, The Secret, you may have been miffed. They never told you the secret. Here is the secret: If you don’t utilize the power of the unconscious mind, nothing is going to manifest. It’s that simple. But wait, there is more. Success is often described as “one part inspiration and 9 parts perspiration.” Things don’t just happen; dedication and work are parts of the equation as well.

Of course, you can utilize the powers of both minds and still not manifest all that you want. Here on earth, we are bound by the laws of physics (pigs don’t fly) and karma (not even going to go there on this one). And don’t forget that our desires must align with the cosmic clock, as timing is an essential component of this process as well. (This reminds me of the line: I want patience and I want it NOW!) Getting what you want at the wrong time can be as disappointing as not getting what you want at all. In this sage advice, often quoted by Larry Dossey, “Be careful what you wish for, you might just get it.” Above all else, learn to trust the universe.

Finally, I am reminded of the prophetic words of author and teacher Shanti Gawain about manifestation, great words to end your meditation practice with: “All this or something more now manifests for me in totally satisfying and harmonious ways, for the highest good of all concerned.”

PS. Bruce Lipton and Gregg Braden also mention the power of the unconscious mind Here is a link to Gregg Braden talking about the power of the unconscious mind:

This is the third in a series of articles entitled “Sequencing Demystified” to review the importance of proper sequencing of Healing Touch Techniques. The last article talked about Class Level 3 techniques, and this article will address how to add the Level 4 class techniques, as well as how to choose from all of the HT techniques in sequences that work most effectively.

The two additional HT techniques taught in the Class Level 4 are the Full Body Connection and Etheric Vitality. Etheric Vitality is an Opening Technique and is most appropriate to use at the beginning of a healing session, or as a self-meditation for the healer. So it fits perfectly with the previously described guidelines of: Opening, Balancing, Specific Techniques to address the biofield, and Closing.

The Full Body Connection (FBC) is an important technique for connecting, balancing and (optional) clearing the full body chakras and organs. It can be done with or without chakra spinning for clearing. When we teach the FBC in Level 4 class, we encourage the students to practice it without chakra spinning many times so that they can experience it purely for balancing and connecting the chakras and organs. I do tell my mentees and students that once you learn the FBC, I would encourage them to choose that over the Chakra Connection unless they are time-limited. It feels so much more complete to add in the organs and glands!

We also want students to practice the Chelation technique from the Level 3 class, along with that whole sequence so that they learn that clearly and feel comfortable using it. We want them to know this sequence well before they start to use that high vibrational spin for clearing energy with the Full Body Connection.

However, as apprentices get more experienced and tune into the higher vibrations of energy more easily, they will begin to feel the high vibration of chakra spinning coming through as they are doing the Full Body Connection. That is just fine, and, as Janet always said, you begin to know when you are working in the 5th level and you can do 5th level techniques when you sense that. Then you can complete with 6th and 7th level healing after doing a Full Body Connection with chakra spinning, just as you do with the Chelation technique from the Level 3 class.

If you do the FBC without chakra spinning, then magnetic clearing is appropriate. But you do not have to do a magnetic clearing after doing a FBC with chakra spinning (chelation), because that high vibrational spinning energy will clear the field. You can always do some Etheric Template Clearing after you complete the FBC to further “comb out” and smooth the field.

In the Level 4 class, we also encourage students to practice the Body Memory Interview with the Full Body Connection as it is helpful in identifying energy patterns that may manifest in the client around their health and healing.

Some people have misunderstood that the Full Body Connection is a more advanced technique than Chelation as taught in class 3, since it is taught in a Level 4 class. That is a misperception. What is taught in Level 4 does not make the technique more advanced.

The specific techniques that you choose to address the client’s symptoms and the biofield can be any of the pain release techniques or smoothing techniques taught in the previous levels. Just be mindful that you are not duplicating techniques that have the same purpose. The choices should address the client’s needs as expressed in the intake.

There is an excellent section to re-read in the Level 4/5 Student Workbook called “Choosing Healing Touch Interventions” (p. 53 & 54) which includes very helpful guidelines for putting all the techniques together in possible combinations that work well. It takes much practice to “dance” with the energy and choose the techniques that will work most effectively for the client’s needs. But with practice, you will be able to smoothly move through a HT session knowing that you are doing the highest and best for your client with your technique choices.

Manifestation and the Patience to Let Go

by Barb Schommer RN, MS, CHTP/I, Education Committee Chair

Lately I have been manifesting impatience; Impatience that things in my life are either moving much faster or much slower than I would like. Impatience that people in my life are not being the way I want them to be. Impatience when things change and I have no control over or in that change.

And how do we manifest things in our lives, you ask? Why through setting intention! The energy principle at work here is that energy follows thought and manifestation is the energy in motion.

So just what intentions/thoughts have I been setting that are manifesting into impatience? Now that is a perilous question to ask myself, because I will have to go inside to seek solutions and answers! I don’t know about you, but when I am manifesting impatience, it is usually due to not wanting to appear incompetent, or wanting to control the outcome of whatever it is I am involved in. Where do I forget to set intention for Highest Good???

Easy to remember when I am in a session with a client or family or friend. Setting intention for highest good, releasing control of the outcome, moving into doing the work, and facilitating/allowing the person to move into their own healing process comes quite naturally in that setting.

Does something happen between the treatment session and everyday life? Is there a “forget it” button that gets pushed? That button may be related to all the changes that are taking place in our world, in the collective consciousness, in the energies around us, in community, in daily life. Those changes that I perceive creates my impatience because I have no control over them.

Acknowledging life is change, and that growth is optional, I move into that space of exploring where I might manifest growth and patience in the face of change. I have no control over actions, thoughts, behaviors of others. I only have control over my actions, thoughts, and behaviors. Thus my inner work becomes that of setting intention to let go of the outcome – with people, with situations, in my work, and in the many organizations I am part of and allow patience with the process to manifest from that intention. Patience with intention that whatever is happening will turn out for the highest good for all concerned.

I am part of community and thus have the opportunity to create patience by projecting light or shadow onto those I perceive as ‘other’ in community. I can create hope or despair. I can set intention for wholeness and integration or fault and blame. I have the choice to create what I project into community and thus a choice about what I manifest.

This sounds a lot like Janet Mentgen’s maxim that, “Everywhere you put your foot down you have an opportunity to being light to that place.” It helps me remember to let go of control, let go of outcome, let light shine, and be in community. Bring on patience!!!
Janet wrote this in 1985! The year 2015 makes her writing 30 years old. During this time Janet was just developing as a healer, there was no Healing Touch as that did not manifest for a few more years in 1989. She writes quite often in her journals about the changes she is experiencing from trying to eat better to visions that provide direction in her daily life.

In this period of “massive transition,” Janet writes about what it is like to let go and “. . . get rid of a lot of things. I want to fill the trash barrels every week. It is funny, the more I get rid of, the more I have to get rid of. I look forward to the time when I can do this and enjoy the process. It feels like I am doing this on the inside also. I am cleaning out old ideas, old habits, dead and burdensome weight that I’ve been carrying around. When I live in present time, I don’t seem to store a lot of weight. I feel more open, more fluid.”

How much do we carry around of the old with us? As we move into the new year what are we bringing forward that will nourish our souls and help us walk on the path without the burden we create for ourselves from old thoughts and patterns? What is it in our environment that we don’t need or reminds us of painful memories?

I remember that Janet, a few months before she passed on, threw out all her clothes and went shopping for new ones at a little upscale shop in the Denver area. Out went the sweatshirts that were mostly gifted to her in classes around the world and the pastel pants she was noted for in white, yellow and green. She laughed about it and said it was time to dress anew. The interesting thing was that it was really hard for me to see the difference as they were still pastels but now her pants (shorts) had matching tops! It made her happy and maybe she shed the expectations we (I for one) had for the “perfect” death I expected her to have.

Janet was clear on her path and chose to stay on this earth plane for conference in 2005 so she could say her goodbyes in person. I remember sitting with her after the luncheon in the tent outside in the high mountain air and just chatting about insignificant things. There didn’t seem to be more to say other than, “I love you”. She still is and will always remain my teacher. My memories serve to remind me of the importance of this work. Each of us has a responsibility to do the work of clearing, forgiveness, and honoring that keeps this work at a high vibrational level. Throw out the old, bring in the new!

Sometimes all we need is a fresh start!
NCCAM Changes its Name

Josephine P. Briggs, M.D., Director, National Center for Complementary and Integrative Health (NCCIH), National Institutes of Health issued the following announcement (December 16, 2015): NCCAM has a new, Congressionally-mandated name—the National Center for Complementary and Integrative Health, or NCCIH. President Obama signed an omnibus budget measure this week, which included a provision to change the name of the Center. New Pain Management Guidelines to include Integrative/Complementary Care

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO) will put a new pain guideline into effect January 1, 2015, in which non-pharmacologic approaches (e.g. acupuncture, chiropractic, massage, relaxation) are now presented equally as opioids and other pharmaceuticals, the latter being presented with a new warning sign. This is following publication of a PAINS Project Brief, entitled NEVER ONLY OPIOIDS: The imperative for early integration of non-pharmacological approaches and practitioners in the treatment of patients with pain, written by a 40 member coalition of mainstream pain-related organizations. For further information re: the PAINS Project Brief visit: http://www.painsproject.org.

Coalition formed to Promote Biofield Research and Clinical Practice

Representatives from Chopra Foundation, Miraglo Foundation (Dr. Mimi Guarneri and former Healing Beyond Borders Board Member Rauni King RN), Institute of Noetic Sciences and Samueli Institute convened 45 leading scientists in biofield therapy. The resultant paper will be published in Global Advances in Health and Medicine in 2015.

Veterans’ Health Pain Management Initiative

And lastly, in November, USA Veteran’s Health Administration (VHA) Office of Patient Centered Care and Cultural Transformation convened over 40 integrative health leaders within the VHA to develop a strategic plan for integrative care for US veterans. This followed an April 2014 Senate Committee on Veterans’ Affairs examination of alternatives to opioid use for pain management.
